Case study scenario

Your Canadian company is looking to expand operations into a foreign country. This could occur through forming a locally incorporated subsidiary to bid on new mining concessions or obtaining an interest (outright or through a subsidiary) in an existing entity.

Structuring a mining investment: example of a Canadian company investing in a gold mine in Ghana

Case study scenario

A few years later, you've incorporated a local subsidiary that controls and operates a gold mine. You need to negotiate a new Supply Agreement.

What does this raise with respect to disputes issues?

Case study scenario

The Supply Agreement is in place. Deliveries of doré are to be made to a local port. While en route a large shipment is seized by armed militias.

Thank you
