

Dentons' Disruption Risk Mitigation (DRM)

Dentons' Disruption Risk Mitigation (DRM) program delivers unparalleled regulatory and compliance intelligence to clients in the innovation ecosystem, on a predictable fee structure.

The disruptive economy—and those who invest in it—face a considerable burden to remain compliant, and to preempt or mitigate new public policy and regulatory liabilities. Dentons can help you lessen that burden. As the world's largest law firm, Dentons leverages our substantial global resources to provide unequaled political and regulatory intelligence that minimizes uncertainty.

By indexing all relevant federal, state and municipal regulations, our DRM program provides clarity to private equity firms, angel investors and venture capitalists evaluating new investments.

Our tailored consultation inventories the full scope of public policy matters that may impact the operation of business, including:

- Statutory limitation
- Reporting requirements
- Industry-specific taxes and fees
- Possible tax incentives
- Licensure requirements;
- Incumbent industries
- Stakeholders and opponents
- Funding streams
- National, local and niche media

Dentons understands that robust due diligence requires not only financial fact-finding, but also regulatory and political review.

This comprehensive regulatory audit ensures that no policy comes as a surprise to operators or investors. And the audit's predictable fee structure likewise ensures that no cost comes as a surprise to clients.

Dentons' DRM program is led by an experienced team of legal and regulatory affairs professionals, including former members of Congress, state attorneys general, state legislative leaders and local office holders. Once responsible for crafting, managing or enforcing law and policy, they understand the importance of holistic compliance and policy intelligence.

Our bespoke regulatory compliance analysis brings clarity to the uncertainty of the disruptive economy, minimizing risk to your companies and your investments.
