

Dentons ranked Poland's no. 1 law firm by Rzeczpospolita for sixth consecutive year

April 21, 2017

Dentons has come first among Polish law firms for the sixth time running in three key categories, namely in terms of total headcount of fee-earners, number of licensed legal practitioners and gross income.

According to a survey of law firms, Dentons is the market leader in real estate and energy law. The leading practitioners among individually recommended lawyers are Paweł Dębowski, Head of the European Real Estate Practice, and Arkadiusz Krasnodębski, Dentons Poland Managing Partner and Head of the European and Polish Energy and Natural Resources Practices.

Dentons was also recommended in tax and public procurement law, with Aldona Kowalczyk, Partner in charge of the Public Procurement practice in Warsaw, additionally receiving an individual recommendation.

Rzeczpospolita recognized Dentons for representing UPC Polska in connection with a PLN 3 billion project involving the acquisition of a 100 percent stake in Multimedia Polska S.A., a leading transaction on the Polish M&A market last year.

“Rzeczpospolita’s ranking is deservedly revered by law firms with a Polish presence. We are delighted that we came first in three key categories once again and we are also proud that our lawyers received personal recommendations in their respective areas of law. For many years, we have consistently implemented our strategy to build a leading full service law firm in Poland, and Rzeczpospolita’s ranking results are testament to our success in achieving our original goal,” said Arkadiusz Krasnodębski, Dentons Poland Managing Partner.

The results of Rzeczpospolita’s legal ranking were announced at an official gala event held at Warsaw’s Bellotto Hotel on April 20, 2017.
