

Dentons Bingham Greenebaum welcomes back environmental lawyer Robin Thomerson

June 16, 2021

Dentons Bingham Greenebaum announces that Robin Thomerson has rejoined the Firm as a partner in the Lexington office. Thomerson focuses her practice on environmental law issues that arise regarding permitting and compliance with the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act, the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA).

Thomerson has represented various entities, including utilities and manufacturers, in maintaining compliance with environmental laws. In a complex and ever-evolving regulatory environment, she helps clients develop proactive strategies to stay up to date on all current permitting issues and requirements. She assists her clients with all aspects of environmental permitting and works regularly with state and local environmental permitting agencies.

“We are thrilled to welcome Robin back to our Firm, as she brings a breadth and depth of experience with environmental litigation, permitting and compliance, areas that are ever-evolving,” said R. Clay Larkin, co-chair of the Environmental national practice. “Her regulatory experience will be invaluable to our clients as they navigate various environmental issues that can impact their business operations.”

Thomerson practiced at Dentons Bingham Greenebaum’s legacy firm Bingham Greenebaum Doll from 2010 to 2015.

With more than 20 years of experience with regulatory agencies, Thomerson offers a unique perspective as she works with clients on their permitting- and compliance-related needs. She served as an attorney with the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet, where she represented the Kentucky Divisions of Waste and Water, and she served as the lead attorney for the Kentucky Division for Air Quality, where she handled compliance, permitting and programmatic matters.

“Robin is an excellent lawyer and a valuable addition for our clients in Kentucky and across the country as they face increasing uncertainty,” said Keith Bice, Managing Partner of Dentons Bingham Greenebaum. “Robin’s return to our Firm is a continuation of our strategic growth strategy to provide excellent service to clients as they continue to have more complex needs across jurisdictions.”
