Overview

Alexandra is an associate in Dentons' Lima office. She focuses her practice on corporate law, financing, personal data protection and market authorizations for food and life sciences products.

Alexandra supports local and international companies in corporate matters such as company incorporations, due diligences, commercial and civil agreements, as well as assisting our clients with their daily corporate issues related to companies' line of business. She also has experience in advising about financial matters at national and international level for various loans, such as working capital, import and export, as well as the constitution of various types of guarantees, such as mortgages, securities, movable guarantees, among others.

Part of Alexandra's experience also includes the design and implementation of the personal data protection system as required by local law for companies from a variety of sectors, preparing their privacy policies and manuals, identifying and registering their personal data banks and cross-border flows, and implementing the necessary security measures. Likewise, she has advised companies in administrative procedures before the National Authority for the Protection of Personal Data.

Alexandra also has experience in the field related to the issuance, modification, expansion and transfer of market authorizations.
