

Overview

We work with financial institutions every day and understand the challenges you face in today's post-financial crisis market. As regulators and governments attempt to maintain the integrity of the financial system, a broader range of your activities are now under the spotlight. From stricter rules on capital requirements and executive compensation to increased accountability and governance — supervision and regulation permeate your industry.

At Dentons we appreciate the new risks that confront financial institutions operating in this altered setting. We can help you assess these risks and at the same time uncover your opportunities. From changing the structure and location of your businesses to acquiring new interests and restructuring existing ones, our financial institutions specialists work with you to explore these prospects and find the best way forward.

We view your success as a measure of our own, which means we commit to find practical, cost-effective solutions for you, whether meeting the challenges of innovative transactions or products, or dealing with the delicate situations that can arise in international financial markets.

Our Financial Institutions group in Europe represents many of the largest financial service providers in the world. We can advise you across the full range of international and domestic finance activities, from banking and investment banking regulation to financial services litigation and arbitration.

And when your operations require cross border assistance, rest assured. We can provide you with consistent support across the globe, through our offices located in all major financial centers. Our financial institutions lawyers in Europe combine a deep knowledge of their local markets with an international perspective, sharing knowledge and ideas with their colleagues around the world.
