

Overview

With the challenging demands of life today and the increase of an aging population, more and more people across the world look to wellness and spa experiences as part of their vacation plans and their daily activities. To address the growing demand for access to instructors, therapists and facilities to educate, exercise, detoxify or just relax, wellness and spa facilities are appearing in novel and unanticipated locations. Dentons is there to help.

Whether you are developing a stand-alone facility or one integrated into a hotel, resort, office building, residential building, retail center or a mixed-use project, our highly experienced teams can help you solve the development and operational challenges associated with these diverse and specialized facilities. At some locations the staff includes doctors, nurses, nutritionists, physical therapists and specialized chefs; others feature massage therapists and cosmetologists. We are adept at pinpointing the services you plan to provide, identifying and obtaining appropriate licenses, and ensuring that your facility meets regulatory requirements.

In addition, our Hotels lawyers can provide thoughtful advice to owners and operators about the pros and cons of wellness facilities' agreements, including:

- Licensing
- Management
- Franchises
- Leases

Dentons offers inventive ways to address these and other specialized, complex relationships without inducing unnecessary stress—that's the whole point of creating these facilities in the first place, isn't it?
