Overview

Europe represents a large territory for moving people and goods. This means that building new and maintaining existing infrastructure is important, as well as innovating to stimulate a shift towards cleaner and more sustainable transport. Through our knowledge of the specific potentials of the transport sector, Dentons can help you navigate through the numerous EU and national regulations, financial challenges and technical requirements which are critical to your projects. You can count on our regulatory expertise, including the fourth rail package and innovative solutions such as electromobility.

Not only are we familiar with the legal framework and the private and public sponsors, but we also monitor legal and political developments fostering sustainable transport and public investment plans. This enables us to advise on the construction of numerous motorways, bypasses, tramways and high speed railway lines, as well as on future projects.

Our global reach allows us to pursue your interests in Europe and beyond, offering you a seamless service on cross-border deals. Railway operators and infrastructure managers turn to us because they trust us.

Partner with Dentons, and you will have access to a team that is driven to go beyond geographic borders and classical approaches. We understand the market and anticipate its developments, with one ultimate goal in mind—your satisfaction and project success.
