

Transportation Competition and Antitrust

Overview

The fast pace of today's business world and the increasing, intensive enforcement of competition law around the world demand experienced antitrust counsel who combine a sophisticated understanding of the issues with practical, creative problem-solving abilities and a multinational reach.

Nowhere is this more evident than in the transportation industry, where clients' interests span the globe and consolidation continues to occur among some of the largest industry players. This leads to global scale competition and antitrust implications, which need to be navigated carefully.

Wherever our clients face antitrust challenges, Dentons lawyers provide a seamless, global service. Our antitrust and competition lawyers handle the most complex competition investigations, merger proceedings and litigation across a wide range of industry sectors, including all segments of the transportation industry, whether advising operators, manufacturers or suppliers. We are a truly international group of lawyers who deliver commercially-directed advice and the highest standards of representation before the local authorities, national governments and the European Commission.

Don't just take our word for it: "... the work is absolutely excellent, and makes our life much easier – they anticipate what we need." (Client reference, Chambers 2012)