

Arbitration in Russia, CIS and the Caucasus

Overview

When you need help with resolving your Russia, CIS and the Caucasus-related disputes, look no further than Dentons. We are recognized as having one of the CIS's premier international arbitration practices, and our lawyers have handled some of the most visible, significant and precedent-setting cases in the region.

Dentons is unique among international law firms both in the breadth of its presence in the CIS and in the strength of its litigation capacity in the region. This provides an essential foundation for assisting our clients in arbitrations involving a CIS law element, as well as for providing a one-stop service where there are parallel proceedings in the CIS courts, or for assisting with enforcement of awards in CIS countries. Our global arbitration team also includes a large number of Russian-speaking lawyers based in arbitral centers outside the CIS, including Paris and London. We are therefore ideally suited to represent you in CIS-related disputes, wherever the seat may be. We have particular experience of acting in disputes under the rules of the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), the Arbitration Institute of the Stockholm Chamber of Commerce (SCC), the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA) and the International Commercial Arbitration Court at the Russian Chamber of Commerce and Industry (MKAS). We also have specialist experience of acting both for investors and CIS states in investment disputes, including under the rules of the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

We draw on our knowledge of related sectors to act confidently in disputes relating to technical fields such as petroleum (upstream and downstream), engineering, IT, mining and construction.

Prevention is the best cure—that is why a large part of our work includes advising on the drafting of arbitration clauses and in the negotiation and settlement of claims before proceedings have been commenced.

When a Russian or CIS-related dispute arises, turn to Dentons—we have you covered.
