

Overview

Driven by stronger GDP growth, deeper banking infiltration and the rise of Islamic finance, the financial sectors in Central Asia are expanding to meet demand.

Dentons was one of the first international law firms to operate in Kazakhstan. Now with offices in the main financial centers of Almaty, Nur-Sultan and Tashkent, we have very good coverage throughout Central Asia.

Our banking and finance teams in Central Asia offer you in-depth knowledge of domestic law combined with international banking and finance expertise. Look to Dentons for the assistance you need in all areas of banking and finance, including:

- Acquisition finance
- Asset-based lending
- Asset finance
- Consumer finance
- Bilateral and syndicated lending
- Financial institutions regulation
- Debt capital markets
- Project finance
- Real estate finance
- Trade finance

For local law advice, access to international capital markets and advice on investments abroad, turn to our lawyers in Central Asia. In conjunction with our Global Banking and Finance team, we are ready to assist you.
