

Overview

Whether working with underwriters, issuers or investors, Dentons' capital markets team in the UK is able to deliver clients an innovative and practical approach to raising debt and equity in the global capital markets.

Negotiating regulatory uncertainty in volatile markets calls for trusted advisers capable of navigating and overcoming challenges. Our lawyers work on many of the most complex and innovative deals in the market, advising on a growing number of mandates and increasingly helping clients to deal with tricky multijurisdictional issues in order to get transactions done.

We advise global and national banks, insurance companies, securities dealers, shareholders, private equity firms and major corporations, and we maintain strong relationships with regulators and exchanges, not just in London but around the world.

Issuers based in the emerging markets, and both underwriters and issuers involved in sukuk transactions, turn to Dentons for our unique ability to combine an understanding of their requirements with an appreciation of the challenges that arise when accessing the public debt and equity markets. We have experienced lawyers working in all the world's largest financial centers and active on all the major exchanges, helping clients tap investor appetite wherever necessary.

We are particularly well known for our debt capital markets expertise, our work in derivatives and structured products, and our securitization practice. Our UK practice also enjoys global recognition for its standout capabilities and experience in Islamic finance and sovereign debt issuance, working alongside our network of offices in the Middle East and Africa.

Our partners are experienced in a variety of asset classes and transaction structures, and lead the market in many areas, including auto securitization and bond restructurings, where we represent trustees, steering committees and companies.
