

Competition and Antitrust in Central Asia

Overview

Competition and antitrust law in the Central Asian region is rapidly evolving. Authorities are increasingly using a wide range of powers to investigate mergers, markets, contractual arrangements between competitors, suppliers and distributors and alleged abuses of dominant market positions.

This highly-regulated environment creates a challenging operating climate for businesses and requires sophisticated antitrust counsel, with global capabilities, knowledge of local practices and comprehensive expertise across the major antitrust disciplines.

You can rely on Dentons' dedicated team of competition lawyers based in Almaty, Nur-Sultan and Tashkent, to advise you on the complete range of antitrust/competition, regulatory and trade issues spanning:

- Antitrust and IP
- Antitrust disputes including private damages and commercial disputes
- Cartels
- Compliance and counselling
- Merger control
- Public procurement and competitive tendering
- Sector regulation, abuse of dominance/monopolization and market investigations
- State aid

Complex antitrust /competition issues often demand industry focused insight. You can benefit from tailored advice from our lawyers and professionals in a wide range of sectors, including energy and natural resources, numerous intellectual property and patent settings, financial institutions, health care, pharmaceuticals, computer hardware and software and freight forwarding who invest significant energy in understanding each sector's specific complexities and defending your unique interests.

Your Key Contacts

Central Asia

James E. Hogan
Office Managing Partner,
Paris
D+33 1 42 68 48 65
james.hogan@dentons.com

Aigoul Kenjebayeva
Kazakhstan and Central Asia
Managing Partner, Almaty
D+7 727 258 2380
aigoul.kenjebayeva@dentons.com