

Overview

Whatever your industry, there are environmental impacts. Environmental regulations continue to grow in complexity as citizens, governments and global NGOs seek to protect our environment and supply of natural resources.

Complying with regulations from the outset will keep you in business and protect your reputation. Rely on the comprehensive experience of our environment team to ensure you are on track with your environmental compliance, due diligence and required approvals and licenses.

Benefit from our extensive knowledge, industry involvements and unrivalled practical experience in the many new and emerging areas of environmental and planning law.

Developers, landowners, property investors, construction companies, agribusinesses, energy and resources companies, hoteliers and consultants all call on our team to set them on the right path.

When a dispute arises, you need a team that is passionate, immersed in the subject and tapped into developments locally and globally. We are that team.

Whether your matter is a pollution incident involving allegations of nuisance or negligence, or sale of contaminated land involving allegations of misleading and deceptive conduct, we have the track record and particular experience to resolve the dispute and minimize your risks.

If you operate in the natural resources and clean energy industry, look no further than our team to guide you through the changing landscape of environmental sustainability and climate change law. We are the market leaders in advising on contracting solutions to achieve sustainable outcomes through:

- Innovative approaches to energy supply contracting, including power purchase agreements
- Project agreements
- Green leasing
- Contracts for Green Star projects
- A range of other project and development documents

Recognized as leaders in environmental law, our team includes the Australia region lead for ESG, and a committee member of the NSW Urban Development Industry Association.

Work with a team that is passionate and committed to being the best in the field and can represent you locally and globally.
