

Overview

As creators, users and suppliers of original work, you have an enormous amount invested in your products. Choosing the right protection from the different legal remedies available can demand extensive knowledge of different industries. Our Intellectual Property and Technology (IP&T) lawyers understand these requirements and can protect your investment, whether it's a work of art, a new medical device, a company logo or a computer software program.

We are able to provide you guidance in all areas of IP law, including:

- Advertising
- Copyright
- Domain names
- Focused services: licensing and litigation
- IP transactional support and financial services
- Patents
- Protection of trade secrets and confidential information
- Trademarks

To provide you with seamless service, we work closely with our colleagues in our Corporate, Technology, Tax, Public Policy and Regulation, and Litigation and Dispute Resolution groups.

Trust Dentons to enforce or defend your intellectual property rights, keeping you on track to meeting your business objectives. Well-versed in IP litigation, our IP&T lawyers have represented clients in disputes before the Trademarks Opposition Board, the Copyright Board of Canada and the Federal Court of Canada, as well as in local and provincial courts.

From protecting intellectual property rights to advising on data security issues, technology licensing and sourcing strategies, we offer practical and informed guidance. Our team includes trusted advisors of individual inventors, artists and entrepreneurs, public institutions, emerging companies, venture capital groups and large multinational corporations. We will work with you to find the solutions you need.
