

Mergers and Acquisitions in Russia, CIS and the Caucasus

Overview

While the effects of the on-going, global recession are still ever-present, CIS M&A deal volumes are still considerable and result in abundant opportunities. Still, with so many challenges facing businesses in the current climate, it pays to have an experienced partner to help you navigate the terrain.

For transactional work, turn to Dentons' CIS Corporate Practice and benefit from partnering with one of the largest, most diverse and accomplished teams in the region. Whether your transaction is cross-border or local, buy-side or sell-side, requires large scale due diligence or high level review, tax, real estate, intellectual property, regulatory or other specialty advice, we have the 'on the ground' depth and capability to put together the right team for any transaction. We can help you drive your business growth, meet challenges head on and anticipate your changing business needs, yet you remain in control at all times.

Where a transaction involves the acquisition or disposal of a CIS target, Dentons' cross-border M&A teams in the CIS and London offer you seamless service for all your M&A deals in the region, in particular those involving English-law documentation such as share purchase agreements (SPAs), shareholders' agreements (SHAs) and continuing incumbent management arrangements with local equity partners. Dentons excels at the use of English-law instruments in the CIS, carefully adapting them to the local legal landscape and advising on the relevant risks and implications to help you reach your goals.
