

Mergers and Acquisitions in the Middle East

Overview

With deal activity on the rise in the Middle East, the market-leading mergers and acquisitions practice at Dentons is well-placed to assist you execute your expansion strategies, whether through M&A or joint ventures, thanks to our deep transactional experience and local law capability.

Across the Middle East, we provide you with access to an unrivalled network of offices and associated offices, having opened our first office in the region in 1964. Our first work in the Gulf was for Total Oil in the 1930s, and we have been heavily committed and involved in the market ever since. With more than 50 years on the ground in the Middle East, we have developed long-standing relationships with business communities and governments and have an unrivalled understanding of the legal and business environment in which you operate.

A successful M&A deal in the Middle East requires the support of experienced advisors who are able to navigate local legal requirements—including foreign ownership restrictions—and find practical solutions to local issues in a way that reduces execution risk and cost. Our Middle East M&A team, with its local law experience and dual Arabic and English language capabilities, has a long track record of successfully and efficiently closing M&A transactions in the region.

We work with domestic and international public and private companies, family offices, private equity investors, governments and financial institutions and combine first-rate transactional skill set with a profound knowledge of the industry sectors and local markets in which you operate.

Turn to Dentons and get your deal done.
