

Overview

As governments and producers struggle to meet demands for affordable energy supplies, the regulatory landscape for energy companies is changing. To make sure you address the challenges to achieving your business goals, you need a partner with deep experience in energy regulation at the local, regional, national and global levels.

Dentons understands the new regulatory paradigms that are reforming and refining the way energy is produced, transmitted and sold. By placing your business goals at the center of everything we do, we work directly with you to uncover the right strategy to meet your needs. Our team leverages expertise in everything from smart grids and climate change to complex incentives, rebate structures and beyond to ensure you seize opportunity and achieve and maintain compliance.

Whether you need support in mergers and acquisitions, market competition, infrastructure construction, access to transmission and distribution systems or a different challenge, Dentons can bring a wealth of experience and focus to bear on your success.
