

Overview

With aging populations and budget constraints, national health care laws and programs will evolve rapidly over the next decade. The development and implementation of new health care approaches is complex, requiring that governments consider the views, experience and concerns of the entire health care community. We want to ensure you are heard.

Whether you are a health plan, health service provider, health care product manufacturer, or clinician, you will need to comply with current and evolving health policy and legislation simultaneously. By working together, we can develop and execute flexible business plans that respond to new opportunities and challenges as they arise. Dentons offers a global perspective to meet your unique needs.

Our health care regulation team members include former high-ranking government officials, health care regulatory compliance veterans, and health policy professionals. When you are seeking counsel on corporate or regulatory compliance, fraud/abuse, or government and private health care programs and plans, partnering with us will bring you successful outcomes.

Representative Experience

- Global insurance company: Providing on an ongoing basis advice to the entire company market, as well as individual managing agents, underwriters, and companies, regarding the development and implementation of US federal healthcare legislation. The focus is on identifying which coverages are or may be subject to the provisions for the federal law, insofar as even inadvertently writing subject healthcare coverage can expose an insurer to guaranteed renewability, minimum loss ratios, and other long-term and potentially substantial financial impacts. By helping the market understand the federal laws and applicable exemptions, we are able to help the market provide the coverage their clients need without incurring obligations that were not contemplated or compensated.
