

Overview

For companies around the globe that do business in the US, the role of state attorneys general can have broad influence and impact on a firm's profile and business strategy. To understand and address the many issues that can arise, you need a partner with direct experience and insight into managing the many nuances of an attorney general matter.

Our State Attorneys General team can help you develop and implement strategies to avoid becoming a subject of state attorney general investigations. Should you already be under investigation, we work to achieve resolution or settlement short of litigation, as well as defending litigation.

At Dentons, our cross-disciplinary approach leverages the talents of our transactional, litigation and regulatory teams across practices and sectors to meet your most pressing issues with sophisticated legal and policy judgment. Several former state attorneys general and deputy attorneys general stand ready to assist you, and will work seamlessly with those in other Dentons' practices and sectors to advise and address federal and state business and regulatory issues, investigations and litigation.
