

Regional Trade Agreements, Advice and Litigation

Overview

At Dentons, our global team uses its in-depth grasp and experience with the North American Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and other multilateral trade agreements to guide clients through them and achieve results. Navigate with us through traditional areas such as trade in goods, trade in services and intellectual property, as well as in less explored areas such as government procurement, investor-state dispute resolution, regional trade agreements and trade facilitation.

Whether you're a government, a state trading enterprise or a private company, we can find ways to help you pursue or defend your trade objectives.

Industry groups now look to regional trade agreements as a means to achieve their interests. We have defended with success the interests of our private and public sector clients in the context of consultations and dispute settlement proceedings under NAFTA, the Agreement on International Trade, the Trade Investments and Labour Mobility Agreement, and the New West Partnership Trade Agreement.

Our knowledge of rights and obligations under multilateral agreements, such as the government procurement rules, and recognition of worker certification rules, can also help you achieve your business goals. Our team closely monitors developments of regional trade agreements and is able to advise you on the likely impact of any new agreements or events on your policy or business strategy.

Representative Experience

- World leading agricultural machinery group: Representing in a complex safeguards investigation of the Customs Union (CU) of Russia, Belarus and Kazakhstan.
