Estate and Trust Administration

Overview

Death is difficult for anyone. Dentons' Trusts, Estates and Wealth Preservation team is here to help families or fiduciaries dealing with property of any kind after the owner's death. We help you sort out the complexities of such circumstances and ensure that you do what must be done, as expertly and expeditiously as possible.

Dentons has the experience and expertise to assist our clients in handling, or undertaking on your behalf, the entire process of estate and trust administration (other than investment management), from obtaining necessary court orders to managing the estate or trust to transferring assets to the beneficiaries.

Assets can take many forms and be in multiple locations. Dentons will deal with the complexities of business assets, mines and minerals, stocks, real estate and other assets, wherever they're located in the world. We also work with clients to handle post-death tax planning in order to find efficient solutions to problems, so that more wealth is passed to families and less to government.

Complicated families make for complicated estates and trusts. Dentons can assist the executor and trustee to sort through the myriad of family and asset situations to bring the administration of the estate or trust to a satisfying and speedy conclusion.
