

Overview

With more than four million inhabitants, Rome is Italy's capital and largest city. It is home to Italy's central government authorities, the Supreme Court and other important institutions and authorities.

Many major Italian companies are headquartered in the city, including several state-controlled enterprises, as well as large infrastructure and financial companies.

In such a unique context, Dentons' clients can rely on top-notch professionals who are internationally versed and deeply rooted in the local business and institutional communities.

Lawyers in Dentons' Rome office partner with the other Italian professionals based in Milan to offer comprehensive assistance throughout Italy, and work with European and global practice groups to deal with cross-border transactions or disputes.
