

Overview

Like all of Dentons' locations, our Houston office combines local knowledge and international reach. With an understanding of the complex global environment in which organizations now operate, the office offers local, national and international clients comprehensive legal and consultancy services across legal disciplines, as well as access to experienced lawyers and professionals throughout the US and in over 80 countries around the world. Lawyers in our Houston office advise clients on a broad spectrum of matters, including capital markets; litigation and dispute resolution; regulatory compliance representation and defense; public policy and government affairs; and privacy and cybersecurity, among others.

The economy of Houston is based primarily on the energy industry and the office represents a number of elite energy clients. Upstream and downstream, from exploration to marketing, our Houston team leverages its deep petrochemical industry experience and extensive global energy network to help clients capture opportunities, resolve disputes and adapt to evolving technologies and regulations.

However, health care, biomedical research and aerospace also constitute large sectors in Houston as well, and the office represents companies in those industries as well, among others. As noted below, the office's lawyers and professionals have been recognized by leading peer-review publications in areas ranging from insolvency and bankruptcy to labor and employment law and related civil litigation.

Dentons takes seriously our commitment to the communities in which we live and work—and our pro bono work reflects our entrepreneurial approach to solving problems in a complex world.
