

Overview

Often referred to as the “Racing Capital of the World,” Indianapolis plays host to the Indianapolis 500 and Brickyard 400, but other major sports events as well, such as Men’s and Women’s NCAA Basketball Tournaments, and is host to more than 600 international, national, and regional meetings and conventions each year. Besides the booming tourism, “Indy” also flourishes in the education, health care, finance, manufacturing and tech industries.

The Indianapolis office has a long history of serving state, local, municipal and county governments, including developing, structuring and implementing public private partnerships, such as the Ohio River Bridges project linking southern Indiana and northern Kentucky. Our lawyers also serve as outside general counsel to privately held companies, and handle litigation and transactions for companies of all sizes, including those in the Fortune 500.

Our lawyers offer full-service business and tax counsel, help clients manage risks, close deals and identify and pursue new opportunities. In addition to advising and representing clients on important and complex transactions and litigation, we provide estate planning, tax and employee benefits services, and economic development advice to clients across a variety of industries and business sectors.

Indianapolis lawyers have been honored in Benchmark Litigation, have earned rankings in Chambers USA: America’s Leading Lawyers for Business, and have been honored as “Lawyers of the Year” in The Best Lawyers in America and named to the Indiana Super Lawyers list. The estate planning group has been recognized in the Chambers High Net Worth guide, distinguished as one of the preeminent private wealth law practices in the region.

Your Key Contacts

United States

Meg (Margaret) Christensen

Office Managing Partner,
Indianapolis

D +1 317 968 5493

margaret.christensen@dentons.com