

Projects and Construction Review: Qatar

August 28, 2019

Boasting the second highest GDP in the world, coupled with its commitment to hosting the 2022 FIFA World Cup, Qatar's development sector is in the midst of an impressive array of infrastructure and industrial projects. Taking effect in 2018, the second phase of Qatar's National Development Strategy continues to focus on security of the country's domestic welfare through investment in multiple areas including infrastructure development, economic diversification, and private development, as well as healthcare and education.

Despite the current geopolitical context in the GCC, with several countries levying a blockade against the country, progress on Qatar's current construction projects has continued. While Qatar has managed to achieve its impressive growth primarily because of having the third-largest natural gas reserves in the world, it is now planning to diversify its economy to ensure the sustainability of its growth.

In the ninth edition of The Projects and Construction Law Review, published by Law Business Research, partners Andrew Jones and Zaher Nammour provide a comprehensive synopsis of the year in review for the projects and construction market in Qatar, in addition to an outlook for future developments.
