Europe

- The US suspended plans to impose 25 percent tariffs on French luxury goods, announced last year in retaliation for digital services taxes on US companies.
- UK haulers have been warned to prepare for tougher French customs controls, while UK retailers review supply chains to determine how they can avoid tariffs under the new EU-UK trade deal. Many Scottish fishermen have halted exports to EU markets after post-Brexit bureaucracy shattered the system that used to put fresh langoustines and scallops in French shops just over a day after they were harvested. Ireland's tax authority temporarily eased post-Brexit customs arrangements after some trucks were unable to deliver goods from Britain.
- The WHO warned on Thursday of a “tipping point” in the fight against Covid-19 amid surging cases in Europe and a mutating virus. City health authorities said that London hospitals will be overwhelmed by COVID-19 patients in two weeks if the current pace of admissions continues. The UK will extend a ban on incoming travelers to a number of southern African countries in an effort to prevent the spread of the new coronavirus variant found in South Africa. In a reversal of its COVID-19 strategy, Sweden has proposed an emergency law that would allow it to lock down large parts of society; recommends the use of face masks and provides the option for schools to close for pupils older than 13. Cyprus will introduce a new lockdown measures starting on January 10. Spain surpassed 2 million virus infections.

Middle East

- Qatar Airways restarted multiple routes through Saudi airspace as trade resumes after the GCC states agree to end rift.
- Lebanese Christian patriarch al-Rai began mediating discussions between the Prime Minister and President in Beirut to form a long-awaited government. Lebanon began a 25-day national lockdown to curb COVID-19 cases.
- Israel tightened its national lockdown as cases continue to rise.
- Iran's Revolutionary Guards unveiled an underground missile base at an undisclosed Gulf location on Friday, Iranian state media reported. Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei said he would not allow imports of any coronavirus vaccines from American and British companies.
- Iraq surpassed 600,000 virus infections and Lebanon 200,000.

Note: This report is based on sources and information deemed to be true and reliable, but Dentons makes no representations to same.

Middle East

Lebanon is facing a perfect storm of political paralysis, economic collapse and a surging public health crisis. With no government in place, and no indication that entrenched political interests are willing to make real concessions, the international community has declined to provide an economic lifeline. While Beirut has secured vaccination doses for 20 percent of the population, the health care sector is also collapsing. Public hospitals are full and private hospitals are refusing to take patients who cannot pay. Yesterday, the country entered its fourth lockdown since the start of the pandemic.

Americas

- A new study found that excess mortality in Mexico City due to COVID-19 was 166 percent higher than expected in December and is accelerating.
- Brazil's President Bolsonaro said the type of mistrust in vote counting which led to Wednesday's mob attack in DC could happen in Brazil, repeating claims that widespread fraud could happen in Brazil. Brazil surpassed 200,000 confirmed COVID-19 deaths.
- Coronavirus restrictions in Puerto Rico will ease from today, including shortening the overnight curfew and reopening beaches.
- Colombia's Bogota will enter a stricter lockdown until Tuesday as case numbers surge and authorities suspect that the new, more infectious variant may be present.
- Canada's Ontario province will extend its remote learning timeline in response to an increase in COVID-19 cases among children.

Americas: US

- Congressional leaders called on VP Pence to invoke the 25th amendment, removing the president from office, and signaled openness to introducing articles of impeachment. Maryland's Republican Gov. Hogan called for Trump's removal. Secretaries of Transportation and Education and senior executive aides announced their resignation. Trump was banned from Facebook indefinitely. Justice Department officials said that seditious conspiracy charges, rioting, and insurrection will be considered for those arrested at the Capitol. The FBI is offering a reward for information on who placed pipe bombs in the Republican and Democratic committee headquarters.
- President-elect Biden is expected to tap Rhode Island Gov. Gina Raimondo as commerce secretary, Boston Mayor Marty Walsh as labor secretary, California official Isabel Guzman to lead the Small Business Administration, and former SCOTUS nominee Merrick Garland for AG.
- As of Thursday, roughly 6 million people across the US had received a first injection of the two-shot vaccines, accounting for less than one-third of more than 21 million doses shipped to date. Dr. Fauci predicted that cases in the US would rise for weeks to come. Deaths surpassed 4,000 across the nation, for the first time. Texas, Pennsylvania and Connecticut confirmed cases of the more infectious UK coronavirus variant, with health authorities suggesting the strain is already circulating widely. Illinois surpassed 1 million cases.
- The federal judiciary's electronic filing system was likely compromised by the SolarWinds hack.
- Growth in the US services sector picked up in December. Weekly jobless claims declined slightly to 787,000. The US jobs report for December, to be released today, is expected to show that job growth slowed considerably in December, which would extend a slowdown that began last summer.

State of the Transition: Georgia Senate Elections & Domestic Upheaval

By Alex Lucaci

The last 12 days of President Donald Trump's term will be a high-risk period, with the increasing potential for additional domestic instability in the wake of the January 6 storming of the US Capitol Building.

Reports and videos showed mobs breaking through Capitol police barricades before destroying government property, occupying and vandalizing Congressional offices, and breaking onto the floors of the House of Representatives and Senate. Early reporting indicates that there have been four deaths, dozens of serious injuries, and over 70 arrests as of Thursday evening. Wednesday's events constituted the first time that the Capitol was violently breached in over 200 years, the last instance being when British troops set fire to the building during the War of 1812. The Chief of the Capitol Police resigned after failing to control riot.

In the aftermath of what many have described as “an insurrection,” which temporarily delayed the Congressional certification of Electoral College votes, dozens of elected representatives have called for the immediate removal of President Trump. Although the President has less than two weeks remaining in office, tensions on Capitol Hill and across the federal government remain elevated as many believe that Trump will continue to encourage upheaval from his supporters, despite releasing a brief statement that “there will be an orderly transition on January 20.” The statement, which also included false allegations about the results of the election, was made through a spokesman on Twitter, as the President was blocked from the platform for “policy violations.” On Thursday, Facebook and Instagram also announced that President Trump will be banned from posting on the platform, with CEO Mark Zuckerberg saying that “we believe the risks of allowing the president to continue to use our service during this period are simply too great.”

State of the Transition: Georgia Senate Elections & Domestic Upheaval

Elected officials, members of the executive branch, and business executives such as Zuckerberg have been propelled into action during the last 48 hours, as the stability of the political and security situation in Washington hangs in the balance. Two cabinet members, Transportation Secretary Elaine Chao and Education Secretary Betsy DeVos, have resigned. On Thursday afternoon, both Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi called for Vice President Pence to invoke the 25th Amendment and remove President Trump from office, with Pelosi saying that he “incited an armed insurrection against America.” Speaker Pelosi also confirmed that the Congress may be prepared to move forward with impeachment if Vice President Pence and the Cabinet do not remove the President himself. Although this scenario is unprecedented and remains unlikely, analysts believe that the threat of impeachment is intended to deter President Trump from further inciting his supporters or likewise interfering with the transition of power.

These unprecedented events have largely obscured the fact that the balance of power in Washington will shift dramatically beginning on January 20. On Tuesday, Senate Democrats retook control of the upper chamber by winning both run-off races in the state of Georgia.

The surprise victories in a traditionally red state have upended the expected political calculus for the coming year, with Democrats now controlling the presidency and both legislative branches (vice president-elect Kamala Harris will act as the deciding vote in the case of a 50-50 tie in the Senate). Sen. Chuck Schumer will take the gavel from Majority Leader Mitch McConnell on January 20, when he is expected to begin enacting an ambitious legislative agenda with the support of President-elect Biden. On top of the list of priorities is additional COVID-19 related stimulus in the form of $2,000 direct checks to American families. Sen. Schumer is known to have close relationships with both President-elect Biden and Vice President-elect Harris and will work in close coordination with the White House on their legislative agenda.

The results of the Senate races in Georgia have also factored into President-elect Biden’s decision making as it relates to his Cabinet appointments. On Wednesday, Biden selected Merrick Garland as his choice for Attorney General, an unusual pick that some believe is designed to bolster the Justice Department’s independence from politics. The decision, however, appears to have been made with politics in mind - Biden now has the votes in the Senate to fill Garland's position as chief judge on the US Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. Recent nominations to President-elect Biden's team also include Boston Mayor Marty Walsh as Labor Secretary, Rhode Island Governor Gina Raimondo as Commerce Secretary, and Connecticut education commissioner Miguel Cardona as Secretary of Education. With these latest picks, Biden has completed the announcement process for his executive Cabinet. Only one cabinet-level position remains without a nomination: Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. This appointment is expected to be announced ahead of Biden's inauguration on January 20 - David Cohen, former deputy director of the CIA, remains the frontrunner for the top job at Langley. The vast majority of Biden's appointments thus far have received bipartisan support and are expected to pass Senate confirmation easily. The one exception remains Neera Tanden as director of the Office for Management and Budget, although the Democratic Senate victories in Georgia have increased the likelihood that she will be confirmed.
