KEY TAKEAWAYS

China's politburo doubled down on the zero-COVID policy, saying Beijing would fight any criticism of its COVID policy.

The US criticized Russia for nuclear weapons saber rattling, saying it is not the behavior of a responsible nuclear power to engage in that kind of rhetoric.

Global stocks tumbled amid investors' concerns over rising interest rates and inflation.

WHAT WE'RE WATCHING

The Philippines will head to the polls this weekend to elect national and local leaders. Polling indicates that Ferdinand 'Bongbong' Marcos Jr., son and namesake of the former president, is likely to win the presidency. However, incumbent Vice President Leni Robredo remains Marcos' closest rival and is gaining momentum. Election-related violence may increase this weekend, especially armed guerilla activity in the Mindanao Islands (southern Philippines).

If elected, Marcos would likely implement a pandemic recovery plan for the Philippines and continue the government's program of infrastructure building. He has also made public statements about reviving nuclear power, including restoring a long-dormant plant in Bataan.

Ukraine War Update: Diplomatic Spats, Russian Victory Day, Donors Conference and Crowdfunding

The UK Defense Ministry assessed efforts to seize the Mariupol steel plant "come at a personnel, equipment and munitions cost to Russia." The push to capture Azovstal is a likely bid by Russian President Vladimir Putin "to have a symbolic success in Ukraine" linked to the upcoming May 9 Victory Day commemorations.

Political Developments

Moving past a simmering diplomatic spat, Ukrainian President Zelensky invited Germany's Chancellor Scholz and President Steinmeier to visit.

Russia and Israel have also resolved their dispute which threatened to pushed Israel from its neutral position on the Ukraine war. Israeli Prime Minister Bennett said that Russian President Putin had apologized to him for remarks by his foreign minister claiming that Hitler had Jewish origins.

Germany and the Czech Republic confirmed plans for an arms swap in order to supply Ukraine with weapons. The Czech Republic is supposed to deliver Russian-made weapons to Ukraine, while Germany will help it to replace them with modern Western weapons.

The attorneys general of the US, UK, Australia, Canada and New Zealand met virtually with Ukraine's prosecutor general to discuss coordinated efforts to hold accountable individuals whose criminal actions are enabling war crimes in Ukraine.

The Russian Foreign Ministry says it has declared seven Danish diplomats "persona non grata" in response to the expulsion of 15 Russian diplomats to Denmark.

In another sign of Russia's long-term plans to annex Ukrainian territory, Russia-backed separatists have removed road signs in Mariupol and replaced them with Russian-language ones.

Battlefield Developments

According to the Institute for the Study of War, Russian forces continued ineffectual offensive operations in southern Kharkiv, Donetsk, and Luhansk oblasts without securing any significant territorial gains in the past 24 hours. Ukrainian offensive operations around Kharkiv likely intend to push Russian forces out of artillery range of Kharkiv city, force Russian units to redeploy from the Izyum axis, and potentially threaten Russian lines of communication.

The UK Defense Ministry confirmed that Russian forces are carrying out a ground assault on the Azovstal steel plant in Mariupol, despite claims from Moscow that it only seeks to seal off the plant.

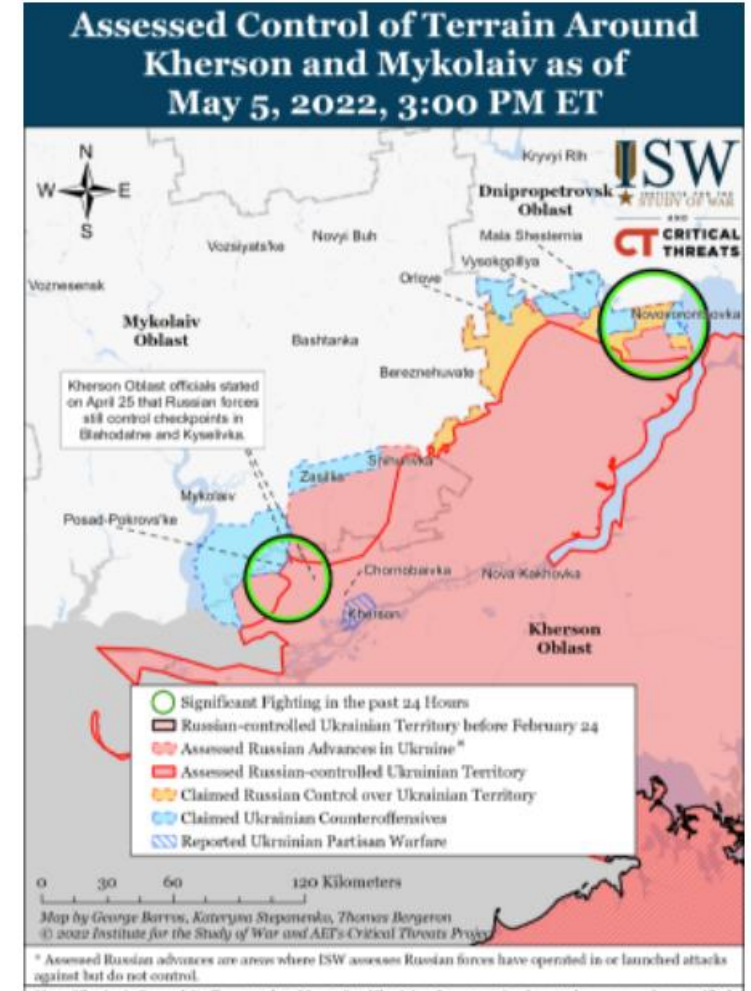

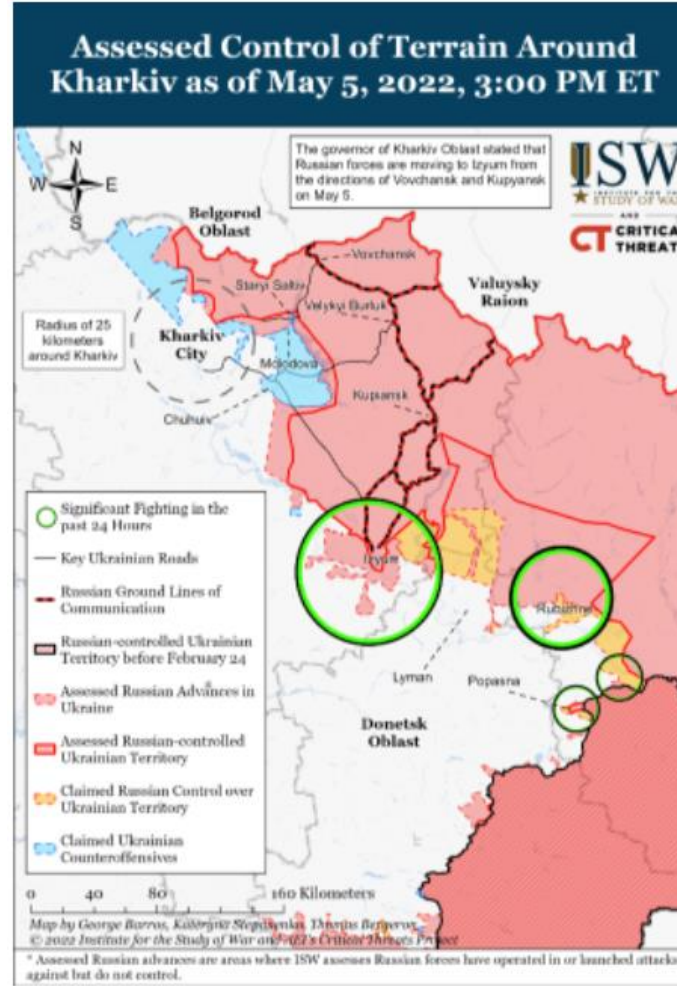

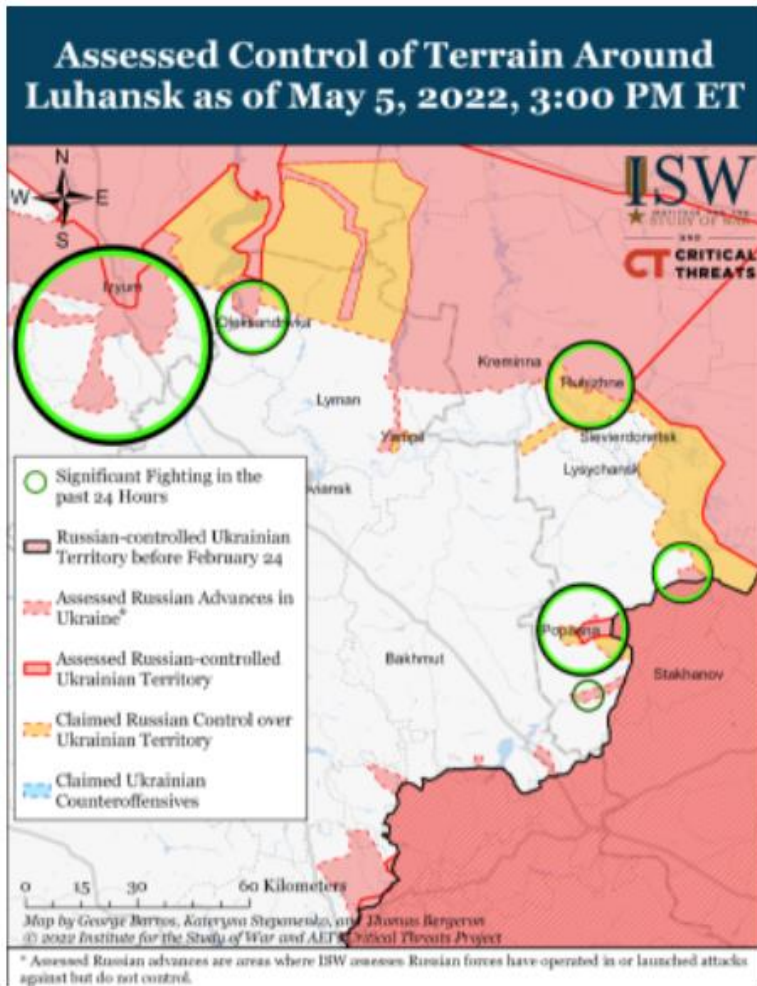

The US Pentagon assessed that the majority of Russian ground forces that were dedicated to Mariupol have left and have moved to the north away from Mariupol. Roughly the equivalent of a couple of battalion tactical groups are still in and around Mariupol at this time. The predominant activity are airstrikes in and around Mariupol and at the Azovstal plant.

Humanitarian Developments

Nearly 500 civilians have been rescued from Mariupol in a United Nations-led operation. The UN is set to send in a new convoy later today in an effort to rescue hundreds more civilians who remain trapped in the city's Azovstal steel plant. Despite Russia's announcement of a three-day daytime ceasefire, fighting reportedly has continued at the complex.

US President Biden's wife, Jill Biden, will arrive in Romania today to show her support for displaced Ukrainian families who are being forced to flee the Russian invasion.

Economic Developments

An international donors conference in Warsaw co-hosted by Poland and Sweden, collecting funds for Ukraine has raised 6.5 billion dollars (6.16 billion euros) to help the war-torn country.

The EU plan to impose an oil embargo on Russia is facing opposition from a number of corners, threatening to split the EU consensus. The European Commission has proposed changes in a bid to win over reluctant states. The tweaked proposal, which EU envoys were discussing at a meeting on Friday morning, includes giving Hungary, Slovakia and the Czech Republic more time to adapt to the embargo, and help with upgrading their own oil infrastructure. Hungary rejects the proposal, citing its energy security. Austria also is voicing strong concerns.

German Economy and Climate Minister Habeck (Greens) has warned that an environmental lawsuit against the accelerated construction of an import terminal for liquefied natural gas could undermine Germany's attempts to move away from Russian energy dependence. Environmental Action Germany has called for a halt to construction on the North Sea terminal because it could put at risk an underwater biotope as well as harbor porpoises.

Ukrainian President Zelensky launched a global crowdfunding platform to help Kyiv win its war with Russia. The fund would also be used to help Ukraine rebuild infrastructure. Zelensky urged ordinary people around the world to help defeat Moscow and said Ukraine would "always remember" their contributions.
