Overview

Kenneth is Dentons' Senior Partner, Scotland. Among other roles, he leads our UKME Food & Beverage practice and is driving forward global F&B initiatives across the Firm. He is a member of the CBI Scotland Council, has recently chaired CBI Scotland's Exporting Working Group and participates in the Scottish Parliament's Cross-Party USA Group. Kenneth is also leading the development of the Firm's UKME Alumni Programme.

As a corporate M&A partner since 1989, Kenneth has had a broad-based corporate and commercial practice, with clients ranging from substantial public limited companies to small start-ups, and various private entrepreneurs and private equity backers, and thus commands a thorough understanding of the needs and approaches of a wide range of organizations.

Kenneth was chief executive of legacy firm, Maclay Murray & Spens (and, before that, headed up its UK-wide Corporate team), leading into and implementing its merger with Dentons in 2017. Kenneth's time is split equally between London and Scotland.
