Overview

Rebecca Curcio (She/Her/Hers) is an associate in the Litigation and Dispute Resolution group in the Toronto office of Dentons Canada. Rebecca has a broad commercial and civil litigation practice that spans a variety of sectors. This typically involves defending corporations in civil actions and applications at various levels of court, as well as pre-litigation disputes. In conjunction with the litigation aspect of her practice, she also often engages in alternative dispute resolution, representing clients in mediation and arbitration.

Rebecca has experience practicing in both insurance-related matters and commercial disputes. Insurance matters include professional liability, product liability, and coverage issues. In the commercial context, she represents financial institutions and corporations in a variety of matters, including oppression claims, shareholder disputes, and class actions.

Rebecca also has a commercial real estate aspect to her practice, which involves representing commercial landlords, commercial tenants, developers and construction companies. Types of disputes include commercial lease disputes and other real estate matters, such as lease default remedies, lease interpretation and injunctive relief.

Rebecca works closely with clients to find cost-effective, creative solutions to their legal challenges, with a focus on bringing a forward-thinking and client-centered approach. She prides herself on her ability to quickly distill issues and to build rapport with all counsel, parties and adjudicators involved.

Outside of Rebecca's formal practice, she is passionate about giving back to the legal community and society by participating in pro bono and other volunteer work. She is also involved in many mentorship programs
