

Do you know what your neighbour is doing? What Canadian businesses need to know about the changing privacy landscape in the US

Date and time:

April 30, 2021

According to a recent survey of global Fortune 1000 companies, 65% of general counsel see data privacy and protection as a top legal risk to their organization. For Canadian organizations already operating in, or looking to expand into the US, that risk is becoming more complex. With California's CCPA and CPRA, Virginia's CDPA, several pending federal privacy bills, and dozens of other states following suit, the privacy legal landscape in the US is rapidly changing.

On April 30th we hosted a for a robust discussion about the rapidly changing privacy landscape in the US and how it impacts Canadian organizations, including new state privacy laws, pending federal bills, and litigation trends.

On April 28th, we held part one of the series examining how the changing Canadian privacy landscape impacts US businesses. Follow this link for more details on the #DentonsPrivacyNorth webinar.
