

CPSC Commissioner Joe Mohorovic to Join Dentons

October 18, 2017

Chicago —Dentons, the world's leading global law firm, today announced that Joe Mohorovic, currently commissioner of the US Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), will join the firm's leading Federal Regulatory and Compliance practice as a Principal. Mohorovic will be based in the firm's Chicago office, but will work across the US and internationally.

Mohorovic joined the CPSC from Intertek, a global leader in product testing. Mohorovic oversaw all aspects of performance, growth and strategic management in the North American region, and brought this business expertise to bear in his role as a CPSC Commissioner. In this presidentially appointed and Senate-confirmed position, Mohorovic has played a leading role in protecting American consumers, and been involved in product safety matters across a wide range of industries in the US and globally. Mohorovic also brings a deep understanding of the legislative process and the intersection of business and government, having served as a state representative in New Mexico before joining Intertek.

"Joe is exceptionally dynamic and will bring clients the unique perspective as a CPSC commissioner together with his deep industry experience, which cuts across many industry sectors," said Mike McNamara, US CEO of Dentons. "Adding a former member of the CPSC to our Federal Regulatory and Compliance practice enhances our understanding of the increasing challenges facing our manufacturing, retail, and major industry clients, and a perspective on the full life-cycle of product development. Along with our recognized strength in this area and talented colleagues, Joe's arrival will give us even more capabilities to offer clients."

Mohorovic, having worked closely with international consumer product manufacturers, retailers, associations and NGOs, will bring that breadth of experience to his work with Dentons' clients on regulatory matters, compliance efforts, supply chain interruption, risk assessment and quality assurance processes. He will be an asset to Dentons' product liability, consumer product and public policy practices.

"I chose Dentons because of the opportunity to become part of a well-known and respected global law firm, with a world class Product Safety Team offering best in class representation over the full life cycle of a consumer product: from proactive guidance on compliance and supply-chain interruption; to state and federal regulatory counseling; all the way through product liability defense and dispute resolution," said Mohorovic of the move. "Dentons' Product Safety practice spans the globe, with more than twenty five professionals practicing in the product safety regulatory space and dozens of product liability litigators."

Dentons' Federal Regulatory and Compliance practice includes more than 50 lawyers and professionals who navigate the critical intersection of business, law, regulation, policy and politics. The practice focuses on compliance and risk management, regulatory enforcement and advocacy, export controls, trade, WTO and customs, and highly regulated industries, including consumer products, financial institutions, media, telecommunications, and transportation.
