

Dentons advises HiDoc Technologies on Series A financing round

June 21, 2019

Munich —Global law firm Dentons advised Berlin-based digital health startup HiDoc Technologies on its Series A financing round. Investors include the US venture capital firm JJDC - Johnson & Johnson Innovation and Sabadell Asabys Health Innovation Investments.

HiDoc was founded in 2017 by André Sommer and Jesaja Brinkmann and offers an innovative app for the treatment of digestive problems that provides its users with individual nutritional advice. The fee-based app was developed in cooperation with renowned experts and offers digital solutions that raise the current treatment standard for gastrointestinal diseases to a new level.

With the newly raised capital, HiDoc intends to expand its presence on the European and US markets.

Jesaja Brinkmann, co-founder of HiDoc: "Dentons made a significant contribution to the fact that we were able to complete the financing round in a very short time. The direct support provided by Thomas Strassner and his team was a great help to us and made it possible to concentrate on our day-to-day business during the transaction."

A Dentons team led by partner Thomas Strassner, who regularly represents investors as well as companies and founders in venture capital transactions, provided HiDoc with legal advice on all aspects of financing.
