

Dentons launches interactive Business Future-Proofing Tool in the UK

December 16, 2020

London —Dentons has launched its Business Future-Proofing Tool, an interactive tool to support businesses in the UK to identify actions to build business resilience.

As the COVID-19 crisis continues to create uncertainty, long term business resilience is critical, and companies that are strong and resilient will be better placed to survive and thrive.

With clients, Dentons developed an online tool to assess, identify and remedy legal issues across 10 core legal disciplines. The tool provides a bespoke company report via an interactive questionnaire and outlines key actions to help companies emerge stronger in the New Dynamic.

The legal disciplines covered in the tool include: General Contract, Tax, IT, Data, & IP, Real Estate, Corporate, Insolvency & Restructuring, Banking & Finance, Competition, Employment and Dispute Resolution.

Within the 10 core legal disciplines, Dentons specialists have worked to identify the key issues that will impact businesses. The features of the tool include, carefully developed questions to test business resilience, bespoke company reports to highlight areas of focus to mitigate risk, improve current business positions and access to Dentons specialists providing tailored conversations to guide decision-making.

Andy Lucas, partner and head of Dentons' UK Technology, Media and Telecoms practice, said, "We have provided massive amounts of advice to our clients on COVID-19 impact: what to do immediately, how to correct short cuts taken to adapt to rapidly changing legal and governmental requirements, and vitally, how to future proof their business. Pooling this crucial advice into an interactive tool for clients to easily interrogate and extract what is important for their business, provides another example of useful innovation which is at the heart of Dentons."
