

What's Next? Talent. Talent for what you need, where you need it.

April 28, 2021

On the heels of a 2021 first quarter in which it announced and launched more law firm combinations than any other law firm did in all of 2020, Dentons has surpassed:

- a lawyer headcount of 12,000;
- a total headcount of 20,000 people;
- more women lawyers than any other law firm in the world;
- 200+ locations;
- 80+ countries.

Dentons continues to offer clients more talent in more places than any other law firm in the world.

in different cultures and markets around the world by capitalizing on the strengths of the first law firm and consultancy with more than 12,000 lawyers, and more than 20,000 people in 200 locations. Clients may only need one lawyer, but the depth and breadth of Dentons' talent makes it more likely that the firm will have the right person in the right place to help clients meet their aspirations.

“Our clients are emerging from the global economic crisis, and are being bombarded with thought leadership. But what they need is specific, tailored advice just for their company in the context of the cultures of where they do business,” said Dentons Global Chairman Joe Andrew. “Dentons is best positioned to help clients, in a post-COVID environment, whose lived experiences all look and feel very different - and who ask us ‘What's Next?’ The answer is Talent and Dentons has the experience and the teams they need in the places they need it.”

“With more people in more places than in the history of the legal profession, Dentons connects clients to diverse and experienced teams of lawyers that are uniquely capable of providing the legal insights and business solutions they need to succeed in all the markets and cultures in which they operate and aspire to be,” said Dentons Global CEO Elliott Portnoy.
