

Who's Who: recognition for our construction expertise in the UK and the Middle East

May 1, 2018

Our UK Construction team deals with a wide variety of issues ranging from negotiating and drafting diverse construction contracts to national and international dispute resolution.

Reflecting Dentons' construction expertise, the latest publication of Who's Who Legal: Construction places our global Construction team high in the listings in terms of the number of ranked individuals. Five members of our UK and Middle East teams were listed as foremost practitioners:

- "Gurbinder Grewal is widely regarded as a go-to name on contentious construction matters. He is praised as 'a very sharp lawyer and a quick thinker who always sees the big picture'."
- "Kirsti Olson is praised for her expertise and long-standing experience in construction litigation. She is recognised as 'a very good tactician' and is noted for her 'ability to unravel complicated claims and apply her experience, insight and strategic thinking'."
- "Peter Richard Shaw has four decades of experience acting on construction arbitrations. He frequently sits as an arbitrator and is recognised as 'one of the leading lawyer-arbitrators operating in the Middle East'."
- "David Courtney-Hatcher is widely respected for his 'thorough knowledge of Omani law' and his 'commercial and practical approach'. He has in-depth experience of drafting construction contracts and represents clients in all aspects of the process."
- "Andrew Jones receives praise for his work for clients across the region and is a well-known presence in contentious matters. He is recognised as 'a very well-regarded litigator and a great communicator'."
