

You can rely on our team to be at the forefront of the energy and natural resources sector in Central Asia, providing you with top-tier legal advice on matters relating to oil and gas (upstream and downstream and LNG), power and utilities, transmission and distribution, carbon capture and storage, and climate change.

Rest assured that few international law firms can boast of Dentons' experience and knowledge of the energy industry in the region, honed since the early 1990s from our involvement in many of the most complex, multi-jurisdictional and cutting edge transactions in the market.

Wherever you are in the process, from the planning, through to the construction, financing, operation, maintenance and ultimately refinancing or sale, know that our team can give you the innovative advice and insight you need. Whether you are a seller or acquirer (on M&A transactions), project sponsor, corporate institution, financial investor, supplier, manufacturer, government or debt funder, we have the broad and deep experience to help you achieve your goals. You will also be supported by our specialists in areas such as environmental, regulatory, tax, employment and competition law.

Benefit from our in-depth understanding of the energy and natural resources sector, as well as our worldwide reach, seamless service, and cross-border, multijurisdictional insight in providing you with the right strategies to protect and grow your business in Central Asia.
